Dear Brian Carr:

We received your request for information relating to the processing of N-400 applications by USCIS. It is cumulative data without information concerning any particular applicant. All queries will be annual totals for the period from 1 Jan 2018 to 31 Dec 2023 (six years). 1. Please provide the yearly number of permanent residents who were eligible to apply for citizenship via the N-400 application during the particular year. While a precise total could be quite cumbersome to compute, it is acceptable to give approximate totals. For example, the total for a particular year could include all Alien ID / numbers which were assigned / activated before the end of year and had not been terminated (through granting citizenship, voluntarily gave up status, deported, deceased, etc.) by the end of the year. If it is possible to distinguish between I-130 petitions (for spouse of U.S. citizen to immigrate), the I-130 based Alien numbers should be separated out and to qualify, the resident must also have been issued the alien number at least three years before the end of the particular year. There should be a separate total for I-130 aliens. If it is not possible to separate out the I-130 applications aliens then they should be included with all other alien numbers. For the general category of alien numbers, to be considered for a particular year, the alien number must have been issued at least five years before the end of the particular year. It is understood that there are other requirements to file an N-400 citizenship application, specifically the periods of actual residence in the U.S., but it is felt that is not significant enough factor to warrant the cumbersome summing of periods of actual residence prior to the end of the particular year. As the actual residence requirement is generally only half of the period with a valid resident ID it is expected that over 95% of potential applicants will meet the residency requirement.

Additionally, due to the scope and nature of your request, USCIS will need to locate, compile, and review responsive records from multiple offices, both at headquarters and in the field.
